Americas for Conservation + the Arts AFC+A advocates for a healthy environment through education, the arts, and engagement of culturally diverse communities.

AFC+A advances tools and platforms that empower these communities to provide long-term environmental stewardship, ensuring a healthy environment for ALL cultures.

AFC+A and its four main programs, the annual Americas Latino Eco-Festival ALEF (leveraging the arts and Latino leadership for conservation gains) Mandel Vilar Press MVP (advancing diversity and conservation in publishing), United Cultures for Arts + Nature Green Ambassadors U-CAN (youth program growing the next generation of diverse eco leaders), Latina Environmental Giving Circle LEGC (powering Latina environmental stewardship) aim at environmental and multicultural education and a diverse, non segregated, and inclusive conservation agenda.

AFC+A’s programs elevates in particular the voices of Latino conservation and cultural leaders, fostering collaboration to better tackle environmental problems from many angles, and using “arte y cultura” as a communication channel for environmental awareness and shared values.

“The Americas Latino Eco-Festival offers an impressive wide range of workshops with climatologists and other experts, pays homage to environmentalists and hosts diverse cultural presentations enhancing understanding and respect across cultures and ecosystems”
—Eduardo Diaz, Smithsonian Magazine

“The Americas Latino Eco-Festival is beautiful and necessary and comes at a critical moment in our conversation about our collective futures.”
—Junot Diaz, Pulitzer Prize and McArthur Genius
DEAR CORPORATE PARTNERS,

I am extremely grateful for the support Americas for Conservation + the Arts (AFC+A) has received throughout recent years helping us grow into the organization that we are today. Whether you are a long time supporter or we are just meeting the first time, I am sure that you will be pleased to learn more about our mission and impact.

2016 was a successful year for our organization. We have continued to tackle environmental problems from many angles and used Arte y Cultura as a communication channel for environmental awareness and shared values, all powered by volunteer force and no paid staff. All our programs aim at environmental and multicultural education and a diverse, non-segregated, and inclusive conservation agenda.

We have brought real change to our communities through two of our main programs: The annual Americas Latino Eco-Festival ALEF (leveraging the arts and Latino leadership for conservation gains), now in its fifth year, and Mandel Vilar Press MVP (advancing diversity and conservation in books) and the publication of ten titles in eighteen months. Both platforms of cultural production have received over a dozen national press features. In 2016, MVP’s books reached new critical heights and widespread attention with two of its publications chosen by Publishers Weekly as top ten forthcoming books for fall 2016. The Washington Post selected our latest translated fiction, “Wicked Weeds” by Pedro Cabiya as Fall 2016 Best Fantasy & Science Fiction. Our first Yiddish translation of Blume Lempel’s stories “Oedipus in Brooklyn” received a Kirkus starred review and our Hebrew translation of Israeli author Nava Semel “Isra Isle” was selected by Publishers Weekly as Fall 2016 Fantasy Top Ten.

In the Fall of 2016 we launched United Cultures for Arts + Nature Green Ambassadors U-CAN (growing the next generation of diverse eco leaders) in partnership with the US Forest Service and the National Wildlife Federation as well as a Latina Environmental Giving Circle LEGC (powering Latina environmental stewardship).

Also in 2016, we were honored to receive that year’s Love This Place Award from the City of Denver’s Office of Sustainability for our work as community builders.

As the Founder of AFC+A, I believe advancing diversity is the most important conservation strategy and that the richness of our Latino American culture is our most important asset in the work that lies ahead. Our cultura is grounded on reverence for Mother Earth. Twenty thousand plus years of indigenous genes still drive the cultures of the Americas of the South and reverberate for generations in the families migrating to the North. Preservationist and protectionist values resonate in our religions, our social structures, our agricultural practices, and our arts and crafts; especially in our arts.

There is no doubt Latino arts and culture in the US have clearly driven the breaking down of walls. Just look at how the growth of Latino musicians parallels the growth of tolerance and visibility of an otherwise traditionally stereotyped population.

And yet, while AFC+A is a Latino based organization, our expanding organization of volunteers, supporters and donors continues to grow in its diversity. Mother Earth provides the air we breathe and the water we drink without any consideration of race, color, nationality or religion. Your generous, tax deductible support can help AFC+A educate and prepare our children to support, enjoy and demand a sustainable future for themselves and their children.

I can’t wait to see what we can accomplish together!

Vision
The Americas Latino Eco Festival (ALEF) - a nonprofit event free and open to all - is a Latino hosted multicultural event elevating in particular, the voices of communities of color and women in conservation and cultural leadership, fostering collaboration to better tackle environmental problems from many angles, and using arte y cultura as a communication channel for environmental awareness and shared values.

Mission
To promote environmental awareness and create a platform for dialogue and mobilization for a just society to ensure that everyone has access to a healthy environment.

Sponsors 2016
Friends - it's hard to believe that Americas Latino Eco Festival (ALEF) is well on the way to a fifth successful year. Today minorities make up 40% of the US population but only 13% of environmental organizations, so ALEF’s unique contribution to reducing the “Environmental Inclusion Gap,” is more important and urgent than ever.

If you have supported us in past years, we cannot thank you enough. ALEF 2017 retains the exciting mix of elements you value and hosts a 2nd - 4th grader BioBlitz in partnership with The US Forest Service. ALEF 2017 also offers more networking and adds a wider range of sponsor options to encourage you to take your ALEF support to the next level.

If you are considering sponsoring ALEF for the first time, I wanted to highlight some of our achievements and provide reasons why aligning your organization or brand with ALEF makes sense on so many levels.

Unique - ALEF is the largest and only event of its kind in the US uniting environmental conservation with Latino leadership and families. Donor support keeps ALEF free and open to the public.

Authentic - ALEF speakers and attendees are mostly Latino. The festival’s special blend of Advocacy, Arts, Networking and Education is designed by Latinos and made available to all that support environmental conservation. What better place for a genuine connection?.

Visible - ALEF attracts all ages, cultures and celebrities like Edward James Olmos, Bianca Jagger and Junot Diaz. No wonder ALEF was featured in more than 20 English and Spanish national media in 2015-2016 and gained over 30 million media impressions.

High Impact - Since 2013, ALEF has been attended by over 12,000 people, engaged over 2,500 Latino advocates, educated 3,800 K-12 school children and seeded over 65 Green and Latino organizations.

Awarded - In 2016, we were honored to receive (1) the City of Denver Office of Sustainability Love This Place Award for our work as community builders (2) the ALEF Proclamation by Colorado Governor John Wright Hickenlooper (3) the signed Mayors Monarch Pledge by City of Denver Mayor Michael B. Hancock.

We can offer a full range of sponsorship options from a Gala Table to a Multi-year Lead Title Sponsor. Join us in 2017 and feel the power of uniting your brand with the future of the Latino/conservation partnership.

Join our movement!
Because advocates must come together
Vision: Making extraordinary world literature and translations available is crucial to opening our cultural borders. Its availability plays a vital role in maintaining a healthy and vibrant democracy with cultural literacy at its core.

Mission: Launched in late 2014, the nonprofit publishing arm of Americas for Conservation + the Arts, Mandel Vilar Press, advances diversity and conservation in publishing and is one of only a handful of publishers dedicated to connecting the literature of the Americas. We unite the works of the best writers of Central and South America and the Caribbean with the leading ethnic and minority writers of North America.

History: MVP brings together the talents of two experienced editors, Robert Mandel and Irene Vilar. For two decades their collaboration resulted in the publication of important books and translations on Latin American, Latino, Jewish, and African American literature, art, politics, and culture. Together they created and launched two major Latin American book series, The Americas— at the University of Wisconsin Press between 2000 and 2006 and again later at Texas Tech University Press from 2008 to 2014. In concert with their focus on minority literatures, Mandel and Vilar also published many notable books in Jewish studies and African American studies. Their longstanding collaboration now continues with the establishment of MVP. Publishing between four to eight titles in fiction and nonfiction each year, MVP focuses on works that are extraordinary and inessential - destined to become the classics of tomorrow.

Distribution: MVP is distributed by the prestigious Consortium Group and publishes the best books and translations on the environment, conservation, culture, history, memoir, fiction, science, and politics.

Contributions to AFC+A for MVP books enables us to:
- Discover, develop, and disseminate influential ideas and knowledge to growing audiences
- Sustain MVP’s commitment to intellectual integrity and publishing of the highest caliber
- Embark on new and expanded initiatives such as digital publishing General Gifts re used wherever funds are needed most in the current year
- Individual Books and Named Books Series Sponsorships support development and production costs such as translation, editing, illustrations, permissions, design, manufacturing, and special marketing

Program and operating grants provide multi-year support for translations and the planning and launch of strategic book and book marketing initiatives. Endowment Funds will support MVP programs in perpetuity.

Impact – key highlights
- Number of books published 2015-2016: 10 • Forthcoming books in 2017: 8
- Number. of books sold: 28,000+ • Number. of authors contracted: 18
- Facebook Impressions = 20,600+ • Facebook Post Engagement = 4,200+
- Facebook Likes = 225+ • Twitter Followers = 380+
- Print and Online Media= 15+ Million Impressions (6 national media features)
- MVP books selected as best of season by The Washington Post, Publishers Weekly, and Foreword Reviews
Recommended Ways to Support MVP

1. Funding a Named Series
A Named Series takes two forms: Annual and Endowed. All works in a Named Series carry a dedication page and series title in the book and on the back cover, and are listed on the Press's website and in its catalog.

ANNUAL NAMED SERIES
- This donation offsets production, marketing, advertising, printing, translation costs, and author payments.
- The cost for establishing such a series is $25,000 per book.
- The publication of the books stops when funding stops.

ENDOWED NAMED SERIES
- An Endowed Series funds the publication of one or more books per year in perpetuity.
- The minimum amount needed to establish such a series is $500,000. For example, an annual return rate of 4.75%, $500,000 generates $24,000 per year, allowing the Press to publish one book each year in the Endowed Named Series.
- Because the Press keeps all of its books permanently in print and continues to build the readership for them, the establishment of an Annual or Endowed Series represents a long-term investment in culture.

2. National Literature Series Celebrating Your Country’s Literature and Culture
WHAT IS A LITERATURE SERIES?
A National Literature series is a long-term commitment to the partner country’s literature and culture that will ensure ongoing promotion and study of the country’s life and art. The series ensures publication in English of two to four books per year from the partner country over a period of five years. The books are distributed throughout the world in print and electronic formats and are accompanied by a multi-year marketing plan promoting the series as a whole.

WHY IS THERE A NEED FOR A COUNTRY-SPECIFIC LITERATURE SERIES?
The publication of literary translations in the English-speaking world has dramatically decreased in the past two decades. Much of the best international literature remains unknown and underrepresented in Anglophone countries and the cultural richness and diversity of individual countries is not made available to English readers.
It is often said that books in translation have no market and are therefore unprofitable – they pass through the market unnoticed and forgotten. A series, however, allows the books to reach a wider audience as they can be promoted over a number of years and placed in a wider cultural context.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF A SERIES?
Training of young or beginning translators
One of the goals of the series is to work with translation students at universities in the United States, United Kingdom, and the Series partner country and involve them in the publishing process by having them create sample translations, write readers’ reports, and participate in the editing process.

Increased visibility of a country’s language in the English-speaking world
The Series books are presented to associations of high school and college-level foreign language teachers, and marketed for classroom adoption at university level throughout both the United States and the United Kingdom. In addition, sample translations and readers’ reports in English are made available on the partner’s website, to be used by other publishers around the world in order to encourage translation of texts into other languages.

Dissemination and Promotion of the works
The books are distributed throughout English-speaking countries and English-language bookstores in other countries, as well as available electronically. Marketing initiatives for the Series are coordinated with appropriate government agencies that promote the partner country’s literature and culture at large. The series is promoted extensively on the MVP website as well as in English-language media, and is accompanied by readings, annual launches, and events at embassies, international book festivals, universities, libraries, and bookstores.

Who can support such a series?
Mandel Vilar Press is looking for partners in any country to initiate several Literature Series. Partners can include, but are not limited to, Ministries of Culture, funding agencies, embassies (Culture and or Tourism Offices), foundations, and private individuals.

Countries and organizations that wish to receive more information on this program should contact:
Dr. Robert A. Mandel, Robert@mvpress.org

Mandel Vilar Press is a 501(c)(3) charitable organization. All gifts are tax-deductible to the extent allowable by law.

Robert. A Mandel
Co-Founder

MVP will be devoted to publishing the numerous great writers overlooked by corporate publishers and with no doubt will live up to Franz Kafka's mandate that ‘A book must be the axe of the frozen sea within us.’

Irene Vilar
Co-Founder

MVP will help open up our cultural borders and will play a vital role in maintaining a healthy and vibrant democracy and cultural literacy. Less than 1% of US readers read in translation. In contrast, in some European countries such as France and Germany the figure is closer to 30%. There is much to ponder about the health of a nation when its peoples don't read across cultures. This ignorance breeds bigotry and prejudice. It is clear that publishing translations is one urgent mandate for the making of an empathic, global citizen. This is why the launch of MVP press is so momentous.”

Launched at ALEG 2016, the Latina Environmental Giving Circle is a coalition of long-time Latina environmental leaders, writers, poets, academics, journalists, scientists, teachers, mothers, artists, and activists, coming together to pool their talent, financial contributions, and volunteer efforts in service of the environment.

Giving Circles are a significant and growing segment of US philanthropy. Through this mechanism, a group of people can donate funds to create awareness and promote a specific cause. The funds donated are pooled together and are given to a project or charity, which is selected by an advisory board. They are sparking civic engagement and helping drive social change.

The women of the Latina Environmental Giving Circle are joining efforts to respond to the urgent environmental challenges facing our planet by powering the next generation of Latina leadership.

The Latina Environmental Giving Circle in particular aims to:

- Maximizing our giving power by doing it collectively;
- Leveraging our resources for the benefit of our community and our girls given that the US philanthropic giving rate for Latino/Latina causes is a minuscule 1.3%;
- Providing a living example of the power of collective philanthropy particularly given the growing power of the Latino/Latina community;
- Encouraging the creation of more Giving Circles for the environment.

The giving circle is hosted by Americas for Conservation + the Arts, an IRS approved non-profit who will act as an administrator.

Vision: The UCAN Youth Ambassadors are a diverse corps of young adults (8th-12th grade) in the Metro Denver region that serve as stewards and leaders of their communities and the environment. These students, mentors, citizen artists, citizen scientists and activists will co-create and engage in educational (STEAM) and hands-on programming, cultural and artistic expression and a career opportunity pipeline that is inclusive, culturally-sensitive, inter-generational and community-based. Their work will be meaningfully integrated and enhanced with existing organizations and networks dedicated to science, art, conservation and stewardship. There will be 100 UCAN Youth Ambassadors in five years that serve as a model for how to engage diverse youth to create the next generation of conservation stewards. Launching in 2017 with the 1st U-CAN Annual Congress, Rocky Ridge Music Center, Rocky Mountain National Park, Estes Park, Colorado August 1st-6th, 2017

Mission: Bringing together the heads, hearts and hands of Denver’s youth to create a more inclusive and effective conservation movement. UCAN advances interconnectedness among people, cultural heritage, arts, and the natural world. It engages young people in learning and recreation on public land; crucial in fostering active stewards and conservation leaders more prone to enter environmental stewardship related career pathways.

A ground-breaking program, UCAN recognizes and empowers a diverse generation of sustainability youth leaders and supports them to become green mentors in their own communities. UCAN Fellows learn from world-renowned experts, grow to understand environmental, social, and economic interconnections via arts and culture curriculum, and are inspired to create year-long commitments to meet 21st century challenges.

Focus & Outcomes:

- Model the integration of conservation and the arts to engage with youth of color and underserved communities to and diversify the conservation movement.
- Focus on youth and young adults in grades 8 through 12.
- Focus on diverse communities with a large percentage of people of color and low income demographics.
- Create a system to build a diverse corps of mentors that can engage youth with nature on a regular basis.
- Develop programming and resources for diverse youth to build conservation and leadership skills.
- Build a pipeline for 100 diverse young adults to move into conservation careers or education tracks and become conservation leaders in their communities.
- Implement grassroots, community-based conservation projects that create nearby nature, instill sustainable practices, save money and lead to greater stewardship.

UCAN ANNUAL CONGRESS: UCAN selects students to become UCAN Green Ambassador Fellows and participate in the five-day long camp hosted at Rocky Ridge Music Center and located at the foot of 14,259 ft. Longs Peak in the heart of the Rocky Mountain National Park. The historic Hewes-Kirkwood Lodge and cabins on 17 acres with a stream provide a stunning backdrop for environmental education, and inspiration for art and writing workshops, reflection, residence and the nurturing of collaborations. Over a span of five days and four nights, 30 youth ages 13-17 will come to the RRMC campus to experience an innovative curriculum joining studies in the principles of environmental stewardship with development of creative skills in verbal, visual, and sound arts and their application to social change work.
